UNDERSTANDING AND BUILDING OUR WORLD AND OUR STORIES TOGETHER

At the McCord Museum, we use objects, stories and shared experiences to help our visitors better understand the world around them, no matter their age or background.

With our participatory approach and our civic perspective, we prioritize observation, interrogation, and dialogue in our activities.

Type of activity: Tour

Activity title: Wearing our Identity – The First Peoples Collection

Target audience: All audiences

Educational area: Social sciences – Personal development (Ethics and Religion) – Languages – Arts

Length: 45 minutes

Description of the activity

What do your clothes say about you? For the First Peoples of Canada, clothing is not just a protective layer; it reflects the wearer's age and social status, reveals the nation they belong to pays tribute to remarkable exploits or highlights the intimate bond between humans and nature. At the intersection of tradition and innovation, the social, political, cultural and spiritual life of First Peoples reveals itself, one stitch at a time.

Major themes addressed

- Open-mindedness

In the effervescence of large city centres, cultures mix and mingle. Ways of living, being and doing enrich each other. From this diversity, emerge curiosities that are the source of renewed dialogue.

- Transforming the world

Humans have always wanted to control their environment by creating machines, devices, objects and new techniques. These inventions enrich our daily lives and transform our relationship to the world.

- Growing up and ageing

Human experience is built around essential steps in the life cycle: being born, growing up, ageing and dying. The contribution of community life being different for each of these steps, we need to establish an intergenerational dialogue so that each person can contribute to the best of their ability.
